POEM

Afterglow

I'd like the memory of me to be a happy one.
I'd like to leave an afterglow of smiles when life is done.
I'd like to leave an echo, whispering softly down the ways,
Of happy times and laughing times and bright and sunny days.
I'd like the tears of those who grieve to dry before the sun
Of happy memories that I leave when life is done.

FINAL FAREWELL

POEM

The Carpenter
by G.E. Nordell

There was once a master carpenter
and he lived a good life
for he loved to work, building things of wood.
He was loved by his family,
By his daughters and his son,
and especially by his wife.
He was loved by everyone who knew him.
And at the end of that good life
when it came time for him to die
the old carpenter soared
into the white light of death –
for the white light is where the good souls go to.
And the white light warmed him
and nurtured him
and fed him great peace.
And when this carpenter arrived in heaven
he was expected and immediately he was put to work:
for the Pearly Gates were a bit loose
and St. Peter's desk had a couple of drawers that stuck.
And before long the old master carpenter
began to build a new throne
for God.
