Tough As Old Boots

Does anyone know of a person determined and set in her ways?
Can anyone think of a woman stubborn as a mule some days?

Well, there is a certain mother, tough as old boots in her time, and we're going to recall some but not all of her qualities in this rhyme.

Now, she loved her children dearly and they came before any other, but when they were grown, with families their own, she still let them know who's mother!

She would give her right arm to help them, stood by them their whole lives through,
but she only saw things in black and white and could argue black was blue.

She wasn't a doting mother, not given to fancy finesse,
but if anyone threatened her family,
she became a lioness!

Though awkward and fussy at certain times, we wouldn't change her for any other.
She was steadfast, protective and tough as old boots;
she was our beloved mother.
