Poem

Do You Remember?

When I go out or stay with friends,
We've memories to share,
The saddest time is going home
And knowing you're not there.
I think of you with each new day
In April or December,
I wish that I could turn to you
And say, "Do you remember?"
We used to talk about the past
And people we had known,
The problems and the happiness
And how the years had flown.
So, I will hold those memories
And loves undying ember,
And though I may not hear your voice,
I'll know we both remember.

Remembering John

Poem

United In Love

The same stars shine above me,
The way they were before.
The same sun warms my shoulders,
I feel its rays once more.
So many things still look the same,
It's very strange to me,
For I've an emptiness inside
That will not let me be.
The moon the stars and sunlit skies
Can't know the way I feel,
Or how so many people say
That only time can heal.
But now I see you smiling,
Your picture close at hand,
And love reached out and touched my heart
And now I understand.
I know we share the same bright stars,
The same pale moon above,
And we two are together still,
United in our love.
