The old pocket watch has stopped ticking,
Its handsome hands have stilled,
serene in their silence.

Yet the heart is still beating; still casting a loving legacy over all that it touched.

The Grandfather clock's case has crumbled,
the chime no longer rings.

Yet, the beauty is still there all around it,
Gently infusing its influence; a warm memory on a cold night,

A shared smile, snaking its way through the sunlit
trees in a fern-filled forest, Daffodils nodding their greetings to the dogs passing by,
and the sound of a child's laughter

The pocket watch has not really stopped.
The cogs are still turning and empowering all that's around.

It will tick silently for ever more.

Jack Poyle

Jack was born on 5 December 1934 at home in Aston Drive, Bulwell, the only child of Bill and Elsie Poyle. The young family moved to Grindon Crescent, Bulwell and then later to Rutland Road, West Bridgford. His Mum had worked at Barlock Typewriter Company and his Dad was a baker and confectioner.

His Dad Bill worked long hours, often through the night and at weekends and consequently as child, Jack spent a great deal of time with his Grandad Bert, from whom he learned skills in woodworking and and also developed an interest in gardening.

As he grew up, Jack honed his practical skills at Highbury School and upon leaving, went through a variety of jobs, either leaving because he simply didn't like it, or more frequently, because the new job paid more money. He later qualified as a welder and engineer and worked for sustained periods at Dobson's, O'Grady Engineering, Pearce Engineering and finally Wrights in Colwick, often undertaking specialist welding tasks.

Jack was also an accomplished amateur cyclist and member of the Notts. Castle Bicycle Club, winning many medals and trophies for time trials and road racing. It was through the Bicycle Club social and race events that Jack met Margaret, his devoted wife of 64 years. They married in 1959, raised a family and spent their life together in Lady Bay, not far from where Jack's parents had lived on Rutland Road.

Jack was also a gifted woodworker, making cabinets, book-cases, and clocks of all shapes and sizes for friends and family, still sometimes using some of the tools his Grandad gave him years ago as a boy. He had an eclectic taste in music, from Gregorian Chant to Rock, but particularly enjoyed the piano, which he taught himself to play again in later life after having lessons as a child.

He was a loving husband to Margaret, father to Kim, Christina and Richard, Grandad to Gemma, Mark, Jude and Paisley and Great-Grandad to Max. He lives on in the objects he crafted and the family that surrounds him.
