The Rose
Jim Yerman

Without each individual drop of water where would the ocean's beauty be?
Or the river, or the morning dew, or the rainbow, or the sea?
The beach upon which we walk in silence, with vistas wonderful and grand,
Owes its sweeping beauty to each particular grain of sand.
The beauty of the night lies in the twinkling of each star.
The beauty of the music in each string of the guitar.
The beauty of the forest lies in the uniqueness of each tree
And the beauty of a family lies in you and lies in me.
For each family is like a bouquet of flowers and how bright a family glows
Is determined by the uniqueness of each person, by the wonder of each rose.
