Memories of Trevor's Life
shared by Clare

Poem
Requiem
by Michael Leunig

Lives are sacred; theirs and ours,
Trees and creatures, birds and flowers light a candle bright and small.
Requiem for one and all.

Life is wondrous, so is death;
Glorious the final breath.
Let a flower be the prayer.
Life and death be everywhere.

What A Wonderful World by Louis Armstrong

Poem

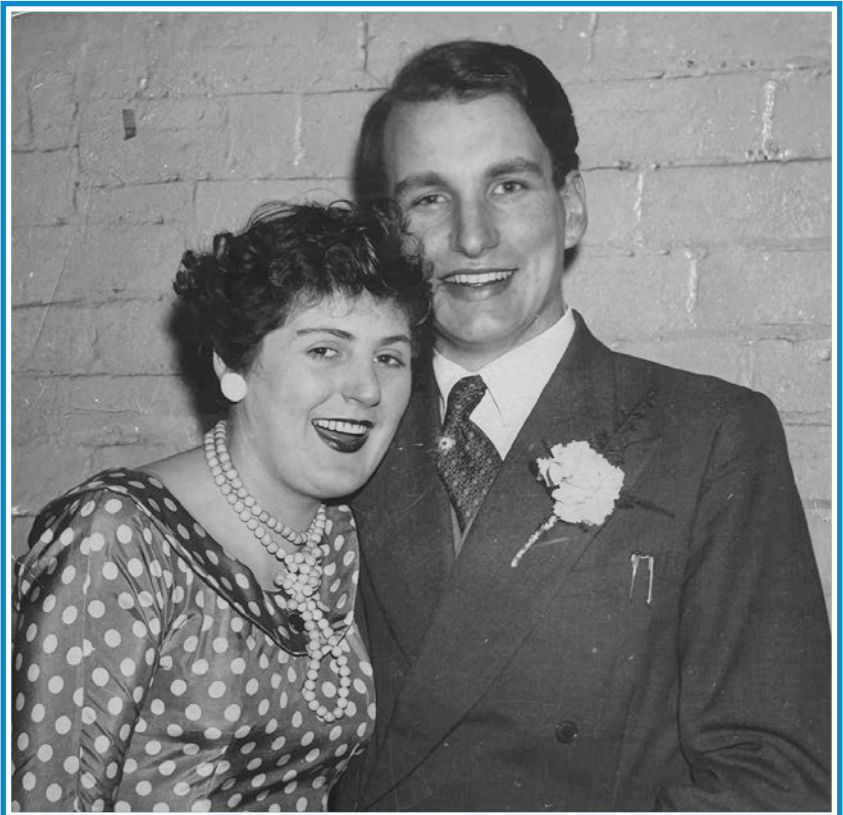

What My Father Left Me

by Michael Leunig

What my father left me was the moon
“When I’m dead, it’s yours” he said
And all too soon his will was read
But he continued speaking from the grave.

“It will not save you, this moon I gave you
From sadness, human madness, life and death.
But step outside into the night and take a breath.
And while you do, for what it’s worth,
That happy man up there who got away from earth
Will smile at you”.
