Stan, The Man
by Lindsay Wagstaff

I remember Grandad, my grandad's name was Stan.
I remember Grandad, a strong, hard-working man.

I remember Grandad driving in his van,
I remember Grandad he always had a tan.

I remember Grandad, and the songs he used to sing, that same old song he'd always sing every time that he would ring.

I remember Grandad and the hairspray in his hair.
I remember Grandad winning me prizes at the fair.

I remember Grandad, always having Fisherman's Friends.
I remember Grandad and all the things he used to mend.

I remember Grandad on the weekends that I'd stay.
I remember Grandad hiding his favourite chocolate biscuits away.

I remember Grandad and the jokes he used to tell.
I remember Grandad shouting, "We're not in!" from behind the door when I'd ring the bell.

I remember Grandad and the man he used to be.
I remember Grandad and the love he had for me.

I remember Grandad with his fags and whiskey.
I remember Grandad, even when he couldn't remember me.
