POEM

This year, you'll set the table and leave an empty space where I have sat in times gone by, a smile upon my face.

Though I'm no longer with you as you celebrate this year, I'll send my love in little signs to show you I'm still here.

The snowflakes that are falling were sent your way by me and behind your snowy footprints, a set of mine you'll see.
In a sky of twinkling stars, one shines extra bright to guide you through this darkness and send you strength and light.

So if you spot a robin who returns throughout the day, take it as a sign I'm close, just checking you're okay.
